GLADIOLUS CULTURE

GLADIOLUS are very easy to grow and will do well in almost any good garden soil. However, if additional fertilization is given by spading in well-rotted manure in the Fall, or mixing a good potato fertilizer well into the soil before planting, the bulbs will repay you with extra large flowers and gorgeous colors. There is no set planting time. When the ground has become warm, or about corn planting time, is the usual time to put in bulbs.

Plant the bulbs four inches deep in heavy soil, and five or six inches deep in light sandy soil. Six to eight inches apart is about right for the best garden results.

Gladiolus like sunshine and moisture. Keep the ground cultivated. By so doing moisture is retained and the weeds are kept down.

The gladiolus is the finest of cut flowers. In cutting, care should be taken to leave 3 or 4 leaves for developing the new bulb.

Before freezing time, dig, dry a day or two in the open air, and then place them in flat boxes in a cool dry vegetable cellar. In six weeks the bulbs will be sufficiently dry so that the old dried bulbs, roots and dirt may be separated from the new bulbs. Replace them in their boxes in the cellar to rest until planting time the following spring.
